Successful Joint Staff Training Unveils Progress for LOST2 Project in Perugia

In a significant stride forward, the LOST2 project partners convened in Perugia, Italy, for the second Joint Staff Training activity. The week-long event proved to be immensely successful, focusing on the pivotal theme of "Definition of competences at the European level for the recognition of the Qualification."

The intensive three-day training provided a platform for project partners to immerse themselves in the ongoing development of the LOST2 qualification, titled "Expert in the Research of Missing People and Children." A central point of discussion revolved around the necessary procedures for securing formal recognition of this qualification within the educational systems across the European Union.

Collaboration took centre stage as partners engaged closely with experts from associations specializing in the disappearance of minors. Additionally, valuable insights were gleaned from training professionals who actively contributed to shaping the design of the LOST2 qualification. This collaborative effort is set to bolster the qualification's comprehensive approach and relevance.

Looking ahead, the LOST2 Project is gearing up for a pilot training action. This forthcoming initiative aims to test the qualification among diverse stakeholders, including law enforcement agencies, lawyers, private individuals, and voluntary associations committed to the search for missing persons. The inclusive nature of this pilot underscores the project's dedication to ensuring the qualification meets the needs of professionals and stakeholders across the sector. The success of the recent training activity in Perugia sets a promising tone for the project's future endeavours.
